

Taylor, Smith getting to 'roots' with voters

BY TRACI BONNEY

For both Sheila Smith and Gene Taylor, it's the personal touch that counts in the race for Congress.

Both candidates for the office of Fifth Congressional District Representative are basing their campaigns on face-to-face contact with the voters.

Smith, wife of the late Rep. Larkin Smith, said, "We're doing a lot of personal contacts, having an excellent grassroots campaign."

She plans to use the same approach later in the campaign by scheduling speaking engagements. In addition, she said, some debates are planned.

"We'll do whatever it takes to win this race," she commented. Chuck Benvenuti, Taylor's campaign manager, said, "Right now we're not doing a lot on the campaign because Gene is finishing his work in Washington."

"When we do begin in October, we'll hit the streets at 5 a.m. every day, seven days a week, and finish around 11 p.m. or midnight. Gene will be walking the streets, saying hello to people and asking for their support."

Smith said she considers the economy, keeping the homeport designation, the loss of jobs at the army ammunition plant and the state's education system to be the main issues in the campaign that concern Mississippi residents.

In speaking of issues, Benvenuti said, "It's education and jobs, and Gene has a track record during the short time he's been in Washington for getting things done in those areas."

Smith said she thinks her business background, with 16 years in real estate and nine years as a real estate office owner, are her biggest assets in the race for Congress.

"With my experience as an owner, I think I can relate to the needs and concerns of small businesses in the state."

"I think that being a real estate agent is much like being in Congress. The duties run along many of the same lines: working with people to meet their needs."

Benvenuti counted Taylor's experience, character and family values among his assets. He called Taylor "a fighter for south Mississippi."

"He's been a major player in freshwater diversion, the deepening of the Gulfport ship channel and efforts to privatize the ammunition plant," Benvenuti remarked.

"He's shown you can be tenacious, you can have a backbone, you can get respect from people and you can get the job done."

Benvenuti identified Andover Associates of Bay St. Louis, which was mentioned in recent articles about Taylor's campaign, as a firm used by the Taylor campaign for fundraising, management consulting and "a little bit of everything."

A report filed recently at the secretary of state's office shows that Taylor spent $80,832 on his campaign during the first six months of the year, while Smith spent $78,440.

Phone campers pleased, area benefits from rally

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

It is estimated some $400,000 was spent in the area by members of the Telephone Family Pioneer Campers International Rally held at Buccaneer State Park last week.

Jay Lagasse, representative of the Gulf Coast Council of the Telephone Pioneers reports the rally held at Buccaneer was a huge success and well received by members of the international organization.

"The cooperation of the officials of the county and cities, chamber, National Guard, civic organizations, businesses, RSV, park, and interested citizens, all helped make this one of the most successful rallies ever held by the Telephone Pioneer Family Campers," Lagasse reported.

Since the rally, the Pioneers plan on having their monthly meeting at Buccaneer Park, instead of in North Mississippi, Lagasse said.

"The cooperative efforts of so many folks helped make the rally run smoothly from beginning to end, and this included all of the extra events," Lagasse said.

There were 426 camping units registered at Buccaneer and six families lodged at local motels, for a total of some 1,103 people.

The tours of New Orleans included 419 campers, while 43 golfers participated in a Pass Christian tournament.

The dinner and dance held at the Hancock County Civic Center had 712 people in attendance. Foods were provided by a local caterer.

The campers in turn visited many of the local food establishments during their stay which in some instances was over one week at the Waveland park.

The catfish dinner at Bucca-neer had 796 campers in attendance while the red beans and rice dinner sponsored by the Chamber with the help of several local food outlets, served 775 plates.

The "July-Mardi Gras/St. Patrick's" parade sponsored by the Waveland Civic Association was a big success, Lagasse said.

Lagasse said, "Many of campers reported to him that they would be returning to Buccaneer Park because of the 'good old' Southern hospitality shown them while here at the rally."

Homer Hall, wagonmaster for the rally, on Saturday reported his organization estimates members spent over $400,000 during the stay with the majority being in the Hancock County area.

Hall reports he is looking forward to his next visit to the park.

Grand jury report released

The following is the report of the Hancock County Circuit Court grand jury for the July term.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF HANCOCK COUNTY MISSISSIPPI

FINAL REPORT OF THE JULY 1990 GRAND JURY TO THE HONORABLE KOSTA N. VLAHOS, CIRCUIT COURT JUDGE:

We, the July 1990 Grand Jury of Hancock County, Mississippi, having been selected, sworn, impanelled and charged, respectfully, submit this, our Final Report.

We were impanelled on July 2, 1990 and were in session July 9, July 10, July 11, July 12 and July 13, 1990 and considered 88 cases. We have returned 80 True Bills and five No Bills. We have passed two cases to the next Grand Jury and one case was docketed in error.

MISSISSIPPI FORESTRY COMMISSION

Mark Jamieson reported that one of the jobs of the Forestry Commission is to control forest fires. Last year there were 134 fires with 1,872 acres burned, averaging 13.9 acres burned. The foregoing number was down from the previous year, partly because of the wet weather. Since arson causes most forest fires, the Grand Jury recommends that the Commission investigate, offering a reward to a person turning in someone who commits arson. Said reward should be well publicized if available.

The Forestry Commission offers management advice to private land owners, manages forestry on all 16th Section land, plants trees and is available for Civil Defense duties.

CHANCERY CLERK

The Grand Jury heard a report from Mike Necaise, Hancock County Chancery Clerk.

He reported that the new building for the Department of Human Services would soon be occupied by that department, thereby vacating the former building, which was cited by several former Grand Juries for inadequacy. Mr. Necaise also discussed the eventuality of a new courthouse for the county in the future.

He highly recommended that the feasibility of such an occurrence be studied having stated that the fragmentation of county services at the present time led to inefficiency within the system.

Finally, Mr. Necaise stated that several industries, which could create several hundred jobs, are currently considering locating in Hancock County.

SCHOOLS

Terry Randolph, superintendent of Hancock County Schools appeared before the Grand Jury on July 13, 1990. Mr. Randolph explained that the state is divided into townships equaling 36 square miles. Within each township, the 16th section is dedicated to public schools and their maintenance.

These 16th section lands may be in agriculture, commercial, forestry or mineral. The superintendent further explained "lieu lands" and their disposition.

Mr. Randolph confirmed that the new high school will be completed.

Jushaway indicted in Gillum murders

BY JANET MCQUEEN

Joe L. Jushaway, 20, of Waveland was indicted on two counts of capital murder, charges of robbery and burglary of an inhabited dwelling by the Hancock County July Grand Jury in the deaths of two of his Middletown neighbors.

Novella Gillum, 66, and her granddaughter, Latrice Renee Gillum, 5, were found by Waveland Police officers on the morning of December 7, 1989 after the child had failed to appear for kindergarten.

The grandmother was stabbed 22 times, according to a pathologist's report, while the child was stabbed 12 times.

Mrs. Gillum's purse was found behind her home at 508 Morris St., with her wallet and money missing.

The deaths stunned residents, who had known the elderly grandmother as "Miss Dobbie".

Jushaway, who lived directly across the street from the Gillums, was arrested two weeks after the murders and remained incarcerated in the Hancock County jail without bond.

Lower Bay 'bleeding' continues

BY TRACI BONNEY

Residents of Lower Bay Road, take heart.

Robert "Pete" Peterson, Hancock County District 1 supervisor, has received several calls from residents upset about the effects of the excessive bleeding of tar through the asphalt on the road. He has asked Hancock County engineer Larry Seal to work on the problem.

Seal said the county road maintenance department plans to sand the road as many times as is necessary to control the bleeding while he and state aid engineers look for a solution.

Peterson said the problem started early in the summer. "Since it's heated up out there, the tar's been bleeding through the rocks in the asphalt."

"We've had engineers look at the problem. They've checked everything — the tar, the asphalt, even the trucks that carried the asphalt, to see if there was any contamination that might be causing this. They can't find the reason for it."

"We want the people to know that we do know about the problem and we are working on it," Peterson said.

Teens' problems often begin at home—Polozola

BY JANET MCQUEEN

According to Hancock County Youth Task Force executive director Janet Polozola, many of today's problem teenagers share a common denominator—a bad home life.

"In my experiences with youth court offenders, I have found most of the problems are with parents. There is no support at home and no positive role model," said Polozola.

"Many of these parents have no social skills and are unable to communicate with their children. They do not have proper parenting skills."

"I can think of at least eight families I am working with where a parent has not completed ninth grade. They are dependent upon the welfare system and are setting an example for their children."

Polozola said although many of these parents have avoided brushes with the legal system, problems are manifesting with the second generation.

In hopes of diminishing those problems, the Hancock County Youth Task Force and Hancock Medical Center have proposed an educational series of meetings featuring guest speakers and films on an array of topics related to parenting.

Included will be communicating with adolescents and how to compromise with teenagers, among others. The meetings will be open to the public, free of charge, at the hospital.

Polozola plans to begin the series in September. For additional information, call 467-9081.

Grand Jury

pleted within two weeks and gave the Grand Jury a detailed description of the school. When the new school opens in the fall, the old facility will become an elementary school for grades kindergarten through sixth.

He further explained the correlation between the Pearl River Vo-Tech Center and the county system, discussed CAI (Computer Aided Instruction), satellite teaching and the use of Channel One.

Mr. Randolph stated that at this time 11 percent of the school budget is derived from federal aid, 45 percent from the State of Mississippi and the remainder from county school taxes.

The superintendent confirmed that Hancock County Schools are among the fastest growing school districts in the state. With the opening of the new state-of-the-art facility, Hancock County will be leading the southeast United States in educational endeavors.

SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT AND JAIL

On July 13, 1990 we, the Grand Jury, toured the Hancock County Justice Facility. It should be noted that while the upper floor was still not air conditioned, work was continuing and was expected to be operational before the end of the month.

The sheriff and the warden stressed the economy of the jail operation resulting from monies received for the housing of up to 30 federal prisoners and the operation of the farm which provides much of the food used by the jail inmates and rehabilitation for them.

It is felt that the jail is adequate to meet the needs of the county at this time and for the immediate future.

COUNTY FARM

On July 13, 1990, the Grand Jury toured the County Farm administered by Hancock County Sheriff's Department. The tour included an excellent lunch prepared by inmate trustees who work at the farm.

The farm produces various livestock (catfish and hogs) and crops, including red potatoes, corn, okra, tomatoes, snap beans, and butter beans.

In order that the farm not be in competition with local commercial farmers, food not used by the jail is not sold, but is donated to senior citizens, county schools and the food pantry. The farm also offers informal training to inmates in areas such as agriculture, animal husbandry and machinery repairs.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The Grand Jury has considered the pay for jurors and recommends that the Court and Board of Supervisors implement a program for paying those jurors who actually serve a whole day more than the minimum of $15 per day.

We, the Grand Jury, ask the Court to declare us in recess at this time subject to recall at a later date if necessary.

The deadline is fast slipping by for those who have not subscribed to or renewed their Mobile Medic Ambulance membership.

Memberships are only taken during this one period each year and the deadline is August 3, 1990.

I have mailed my check for my family membership, because one never knows when they will need medical transportation.

A trip to a hospital for a non-member can run into the hundreds of dollars and yet, be of no cost for a member.

Mobile Medic Ambulance Service plays a vital role in Hancock and Harrison Counties. Ambulances are rolling all hours of the day and night on emergencies.

A membership only costs $42 for a family which includes unmarried children under 21 who live at home.

The filming of the movie Brotherhood has drawn quite a few spectators, yet there are many folks who are glad to see it come to an end.

We have heard several complaints, the majority being about Beach Boulevard being closed to traffic during filming and the type of movie being made.

Some residents along with local motorcyclists were used as extras for the movie.

I am sure there will be pro and con talk about the movie, just as there was when This Property Is Condemned was filmed some 25 years ago near the old depot.

Vicious Lady

Over twenty years ago,
On a typical summer day,
Many Gulf Coast residents
Went out in the sun to play.
Then they got a bulletin
That the weather could get bad,
So they listened to the forecasts
For news that could be sad.

There was a stormy lady
In the Gulf a churning 'round,
Her name would be "Camille"
As she threatened every town.
August days grew warmer
As the Gulf became so rough,
And folks began to worry
Though they're made of real stern stuff.

Was this storm to be severe
As it had been forecast?
How high would be the water,
How long would storm winds last?
Some people thought of leaving,
Some prepared to stay.
Those with wisdom of the past
Said, "No, get out today."

And then on August Seventeenth
The quiet was there no more,
As the Vicious Lady of the Sea
Came murderously to shore.
When the worst at last was over
And we totaled up the score,
One hundred thirty-two poor souls
Would share this life no more.

We, the living, mourn them,
Tough it's back in '69
That they all stopped their aging
And became a part of time.
We dedicate their memory
In the hope for more concern
By those who guard our safety
From nature's angry turn.

A prayer for trust and vigilance
In those who lead the way
To save us from one more "Camille"
To God and them we pray.

—Bay Catholic Elementary School and Our Lady Academy, both in Bay St. Louis, were officially consolidated Saturday into the "Bay Catholic School System." Most Rev. Joseph L. Howze, DD, bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Biloxi said, "We have had a meeting with the local church and school leaders recently and due to the condition of the OLA gym building we had to find an alternative for classroom space."

—Price decreases of three to five cents a gallon, predicted by energy and oil company officials, are not yet showing up in Louisiana and Mississippi, according to American Automobile Association's July Fuel Gauge Survey. The average price in Louisiana in July is $1.249 and in Mississippi it is $1.311.

—Gold Medal Bakery, established at Washington and Hancock Streets in 1915, was destroyed by fire shortly after daybreak Sunday. Mitchell Kachler, owner, said he was alerted to the blaze when a customer reported smoke coming through the louvers in the roof. Fire Chief Walter Saucier and Kachler estimated the loss at $60,000 from the fire which destroyed the facility.

—It's all supposed to be a big secret, but the whole town's talking about the prospect of a movie being filmed in Bay St. Louis this fall. A man who declined to identify himself or the company he represents, reached by telephone at the Chamber of Commerce office Wednesday, said it was premature to release any information until "all the papers have been signed." However, informed sources report the building owned by August Rauxet on Third Street, just south of the ice house, is to be the locale for the film if present plans materialize. Natalie Wood will be one of the stars and Ann Baxter is mentioned as another star.

—On Thursday at St. Augustine Seminary, a large number of the clergy from cities on the Coast and in the vicinity gathered together for the inauguration and welcome of Rev. Joseph Eckert, S.V.D., former pastor of St. Anselm's Church in Chicago, who has been appointed provincial of the newly created Southern Province of the Society of the Divine Word in the United States and who will make his headquarters at St. Augustine Seminary in Bay St. Louis.

—The Lions Club of Bay St. Louis is projecting and promoting a laudable effort in soliciting discarded dolls and toys. They plan to repair and renovate the dolls and distribute them to the needy during the Christmas holidays. Remodeling of the toys will be under the auspices of the local Boy Scout Troop No. 208 and supervision of Scoutmaster Carlos Arnold and Bay Girl Scouts under the supervision of Mrs. J.B. Goldman. All donations of any kind may be left at Garner's Cleaning and Pressing, at Hancock and Union streets or the Gulf Chevrolet station on South Beach Boulevard.

—The number of summer visitors sojourning within the gates of our delightful city by the sea is unusually large this year and it has been many a year since so large a welcome crowd has come to Bay St. Louis. Bay St. Louis has always been a special favorite with summer visitors from New Orleans and other points in Louisiana.

—The citizens of Hancock County are proud of their roads and have every reason to feel so. Members of the Board of Supervisors are bending every energy and striving at every endeavor to improve the county roadways and extend the work. The Board of Supervisors has ordered the Bay-Kiln road "shelled," which was received with acclaim of satisfaction; this work will be carried out at once, and early completion will be the board's intention.

—There is no gainsaying the fact that Bay St. Louis has a patriotic fire company. Although it has met with many reverses since its birth, it stands today solid and ready for business. —Democrats who are fighting each other this year should be careful not to exhaust themselves so much that they will not be in good condition to meet the common enemy next year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Local movie-making effort promotes violence, drugs, sex

Dear Editor:

I am appalled at the open-arms attitude which has been extended to this movie-making mess within our midst this week.

I tried to have my car checked at one of our local businesses only to be told I couldn't drive down the street if they were filming. I promptly told the young policeman that I didn't care what was being filmed; they could not stop customers from having their automobiles worked on. With business in this area already 'not good' at best, what happens to small businessmen when no one can get in or out of his shop?

However, what threw me was the attitude of everyone around. "Oh, if we stick close to this thing, the glory will rub off." What glory? A movie of satanic overtones, with sex, violence and drugs touted throughout?

And what about our children? We teach by example. They see the adults of the area, even a church welcoming and allowing the very things we've taught them to believe are evil and off limits. These evils being dope addiction, sexual promiscuity, satanic cults, and reprobate lifestyles to name a few.

Instead a church allows them to park all their equipment on its property and use its grounds. This is a movie that 10 years ago would have been banned by that same church, and we would have been told not to allow our children to attend.

On a daily basis, we witness news stories of children, 10 and 12 years old, involved in violent crimes. Upon questioning, they admit to seeing these crimes on TV or at a movie such as the one being filmed in Bay St. Louis.

Does anyone out there care? When we see our city, our church and our locals welcome this low-calibre "entertainment" maker into our area, who out there cares?

In Chronicles it is stated, "If My people who are called by My name will humble themselves, and pray and seek My face, and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin and heal their land."

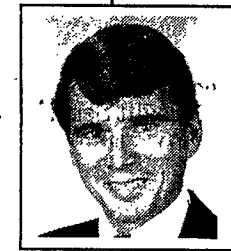

THIS is the sin—APATHY!

What will we allow next?

IN CONGRESS

By Rep. Gene Taylor

Vets earned their benefits

Did you know that Mississippians earned more Congressional Medals of Honor in the Korean War than soldiers from any other state? Mississippi has a proud heritage of heroism on the field of battle in World War II and Vietnam as well.

Recently I had the pleasure of meeting with Mississippi members of the American Legion at their annual convention on the Coast. A common concern at the meeting was whether or not veterans would get their due in the House appropriations process.

I made my position clear to the convention. We cannot cut out the rewards to veterans and their families simply because of a tight budget situation.

Here are some good examples why our legionnaires have earned their benefits:

There's 70-year-old Ernest Boyles of Jackson, one of only a handful of veterans living today who survived three major invasions in World War II—the invasion of North Africa, the invasion of Sicily and the D-Day landings at Normandy.

Ernest had part of the bone shot out of his leg and sustained several other injuries during his service. He received the Purple Heart with an Oak Cluster for his valor. Like most of the returning soldiers, however, Ernest did not want a parade or a victory celebration; he just wanted to come home to Mississippi.

There's John A. Pittman who enlisted in Carrollton and was a U.S. Army sergeant in the Korean War. Quoting from American Legion description of how he won his Congressional Medal of Honor, Pittman "distinguished himself by conspicuous gallantry on November 26, 1950."

Leading a counterattack to regain terrain lost in an earlier engagement, Pittman was wounded by mortar fragments. Disregarding his wounds, he continued to lead his men into battle and a grenade was thrown in the midst of his squad. Without hesitation, Sgt.

Pittman threw himself on the grenade and absorbed the burst with his body. His first request when medical aid reached him was how many of his men were hurt." John Pittman is now 61 years old and lives in Greenwood.

There there's Cotten Ruthven of Jackson who fought for his country and this state in Vietnam. One evening as the sun was setting, Cotton got word that a helicopter had spotted a company of North Vietnamese soldiers near his troop. Cotton and his men were still marching and not yet set for battle when his left flank came under attack. During the conflict Cotton was hit by gunfire and had to have his left leg amputated.

One of the biggest battles Cotten faced, however, was on the home front. While in Vietnam, Cotten and his fellow soldiers knew many at home were opposed to the war. But when he returned home as a veteran, he encountered many people who treated him differently because of his tenure overseas. While recognized that his treatment in Mississippi was better than in most areas, he still felt that some people shunned him.

We have come a long way since Cotten first returned from Vietnam. Americans now appreciate the veterans who served in Indochina. We must likewise remember to appreciate all of our veterans, even at a time when the possibility of war seems so remote.

SHOPPING UP A STORM

By Katy
McGuire Caire

If you're in a mood to treat yourself—and the family—to a steak dinner, you've some fine choices at our area supermarkets just now, with excellent steak cuts on display!

But, if on the other hand your taste buds ask "beefsteak" and your budget answers "burger," why not compromise and still enjoy a steak dinner from one of the less tender, but tasty cuts offered at specially good prices this week?

With a bit of TLC—we all know about tender, loving care—you can still come up with a flavorful, tender dish.

The secret is a bath of warm seasoned olive oil, lemon-tanged, and an overnight stay in the marinade. I was introduced to this formula some years ago in a small restaurant in the northwestern mountain country of Mexico, and have used it often since. I had used olive oil marinades, but hadn't thought of warming the oil!

So, look over the chuck steaks and round steaks at the markets, for instance, and try this way:

BUDGETEER'S STEAK

Trim excess fat from a chuck steak, and prick holes in the surface with a fork. In a heavy saucepan, combine a half cup or so of olive oil (depending, of course, upon size of the steak) along with a bay leaf, a quartered lemon and a peeled clove of garlic, adding black pepper and a bit of salt or other seasonings as desired. Heat till quite warm, stirring from time to time, and pressing the juice from the lemon quarters as you do so.

Pour the warm oil mixture over the steak, pressing it into the holes which you've made with the fork, and when it all cools enough, refrigerate overnight in a lightly covered glass dish (not metal). Turn the steak a time or two when you think about it.

Next day, set the bowl on a counter, splash a goodly cup of red wine over, and let the steak come to room temperature. In Mexico, the steak is usually pan broiled or panfried, as is the custom in much of France and at my house as well, but I have also had good luck broiling chuck steaks when tenderized in this way. And, one of my friends bakes them briefly! At any rate, for pan-broiling, sear the steak quickly on both sides in a devil-hot, heavy skillet, such as an iron skillet (which I prefer) and cook briefly to the desired degree of "doneness."

Add remaining marinade to the skillet, turn the heat low and cook until it's all done, making sure that the marinade is cooked. (Remember, you used the marinade on the raw meat, so if you use any leftover marinade, you must cook it.)

The other day, I used this method on a chuck roast—which is also on special sale just now—with good results. I roasted it, uncovered, in a 300-degree oven, basting from time to time with the marinade and a little more wine as needed.

Or, you might want to try: BARBECUED BEEF IN THE OVEN

2 lbs. boneless beef chuck roast
3 Tbsp. oil
2 1/2 cups water
2 cups finely-chopped yellow onions
1 1/2 cups finely chopped celery
3/4 cup finely chopped bell (green) pepper
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
3/4 cup tomato paste
3 Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
3 Tbsp. cider vinegar
2 tsp. Tabasco
2 tsp. salt, optional

Dry the roast on paper towels. In a Dutch oven, heat oil and brown beef on all sides. Add remaining ingredients. Cover and simmer 3 to 4 hours, stirring occasionally until beef is easily shredded and liquid has been absorbed. Serve on hot buttered buns. (Eight servings) —from Jambalaya, published by the Junior League of New Orleans.

Speaking of beef brisket, those special prices on whole untrimmed brisket speak "Savings" with a capital "S" to me this week. As a matter of fact, I shall be baking one as soon as I finish this column, following another recipe from Jambalaya, "this one for:

BAKED BRISKET
Preheat oven to 275 degrees.
4 lbs. beef brisket, untrimmed
2 tsp. garlic salt
3 Tbsp. flour
3 Tbsp. oil
4 1/2 cups water
24 small red potatoes, unpeeled
6 carrots, peeled and quartered
1 1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. pepper
2 Tbsp. finely chopped fresh parsley

Dry the brisket with paper towels. Sprinkle all sides of brisket with garlic salt, and lightly coat with flour. In a Dutch oven, over high heat, heat the oil and brown the meat. Remove the pot from heat, cover, and cook in the oven for four hours—BUT—after two hours, in separate saucepans, with two cups of boiling water in each, cook potatoes for 15 minutes, carrots for five minutes. Drain the broth.

After TWO hours of cooking (note: you have to pay attention in this recipe!) turn the meat. Add the potatoes, carrots, half a cup of water, salt and pepper. When cooking is completed, remove the brisket and trim excess fat. Carve across the grain into very thin slices. Arrange the slices on a large, heated platter surrounded by the potatoes and carrots.

Sprinkle parsley over vegetables, serve with mustard cream sauce.

MUSTARD CREAM SAUCE
2 Tbsp. dry mustard
2 Tbsp. cold water
1/2 cup sour cream
1 tsp. white vinegar
1 tsp. salt

In a small bowl, place mustard, then very gradually add water, stirring constantly until mixture is creamy. Let stand 15 minutes, then stir in sour cream, vinegar and salt. (Eight servings)

My shortcuts: Sometimes I'm much too busy to do all that business of cooking potatoes and carrots separately, so I just pop them into the oven after the brisket's been cooking for a couple of hours. And, sometimes I just add a little sour cream to horseradish for my sauce. And, sometimes, I just stick it all into the crockpot and let it do the work—that's the sort of a cook I am!

Most of all, I have found it best, as with other beef roasts, I let the brisket stand a while before slicing, as slices stay firmer.

Enough of beef. Smoked picnics are also on special, along with lean and meaty medium-sized pork ribs and chicken leg quarters.

And, at the risk of sounding most repetitious, but happily so, let's all stock up on the wonderfully fresh vegetables and fruits literally tumbling into our markets.

Extra-good buys this week: Cabbage and carrots; rice and pasta of various sorts; fruit and more fruit—especially melons, peaches, grapes and plums. And, of course, watermelon. Enjoy!

LOOKING INSIDE

By Pastor Bob Guidry, Jr.

Fact or fiction?

What do you base your life on?

It never ceases to amaze me that people want to know everything about everything and everybody, yet neglect some of the most important areas of life. The purpose of this column is not to evangelize you but to cause you to think about things you normally don't think about.

I first want to ask a question: Why do you believe what you believe? Is it because someone told you, or do you have proof?

Some people say faith is believing when there is no proof, but faith must have a base and can never stand alone. Why have faith in God if He does not exist?

Why believe in a certain religion if its believers don't have a basis for their beliefs?

If you are going to believe in something, at least know why. Know what you believe what you believe.

If I were to say I did not believe George Washington was the first president of the United States, would it change the fact that he was? Fact is not based on whether or not we believe it but on the proof that one has to validate his claims.

Whether or not you believe what the Bible says will never change the fact that it has been proven to be true time and time again.

There must be a standard on which to base your beliefs, and the Holy Bible is the only thing that has a spotless track record of being absolute in its truth.

It is the only thing I trust to build my beliefs around, and I believe you also should examine it as a base for yours.

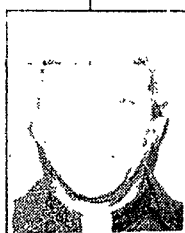

I saw a bumper sticker the other day that said, "Can't find Jesus? Look for Mary."

The Bible says in Acts 4:12 that there is no other name under heaven to which we can call for salvation except the name of Jesus.

Know why you believe what you believe.

Reflections

On Life

By Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

How sober are you?

Most people would feel insulted if asked whether they are sober or not, because most people, even those who drink, do not have the problem of insobriety.

Nevertheless, I will insist on asking the question of everyone, because psychologists describe the process of sobriety as moving from the delusional to the real, from the lie to the truth, from the darkness to the light.

It is abundantly clear from their view that alcoholics and other drug addicts have a severe problem with sobriety, and that the road ahead of them to reality, truth and light is painful, rough and in all reality long. However, addicts are by no means the only ones who have a problem with sobriety.

To say the very least, that description of sobriety makes it everyone's problem, because there is no child, woman or man who does not have a shadow or two to hide behind, who is not engaged in a lifelong struggle to move from the bleak world of delusions and self-deception to the brilliant world of reality and truth.

The more of delusion, of the lie and of darkness there is in our lives, say the psychologists, the more insanity we are harboring under the guise of reality.

Unfortunately, our principal problem is not that we are immersing ourselves in delusion, the lie and darkness, but that we either do not know it or we are deceiving ourselves into believing that it is not so.

Given that perspective, we are all struggling to achieve some measure of sobriety, since all of us are tainted by delusions, by lies and by devious works of darkness. After all, there has been but one Blessed Virgin Mary conceived without sin.

Therefore, the question returns with a slight modification: How sober are you? Of course, and can never stand alone. Why have faith in God if He does not exist? Why believe in a certain religion if its believers don't have a basis for their beliefs? If you are going to believe in something, at least know why. Know what you believe what you believe.

If I were to say I did not believe George Washington was the first president of the United States, would it change the fact that he was? Fact is not based on whether or not we believe it but on the proof that one has to validate his claims. Whether or not you believe what the Bible says will never change the fact that it has been proven to be true time and time again.

There must be a standard on which to base your beliefs, and the Holy Bible is the only thing that has a spotless track record of being absolute in its truth. It is the only thing I trust to build my beliefs around, and I believe you also should examine it as a base for yours.

Schmitt and students earn Taekwondo Plus trophies

From staff reports

In today's unpredictable society, an assailant sometimes makes the mistake of seeing a petite young woman as easy prey for a robbery or an assault. It would be a grave mistake to mess with Linda Schmitt from Pass Christian.

Although diminutive and soft-spoken, Schmitt holds a black belt in Taekwondo, the ancient Korean martial art which utilizes the use of hands and feet in self-defense.

At a Taekwondo Plus competition held in Mobile July 21, she won first place in form and second place in free sparring among a field of more than 280 competitors.

Three of her young students from Bay St. Louis also distinguished themselves in the competition.

Seven-year-old Danny Shiel won first place in one-step sparring and second place in form.

Jewell Davis, a six-year-old yellow belt, captured second place in one-step sparring, and seven-year-old Billy McLain won third place in form.

These youngsters and their instructor received trophies for their efforts.

Schmitt is a certified black belt instructor who holds classes for the youth (ages 5-13) and adults during the week at Loicano's Health Club.

"Taekwondo develops self-control, a sense of responsibility and respect for self and others and superior aerobic conditioning," she said.

The ancient martial art, developed in Korea around 1350 A.D., stresses purity of mind, spirit, and body. The basic tenets of Taekwondo include courtesy, integrity and perseverance. A student must pledge never to misuse Taekwondo and to employ it only as a final means in self-defense.

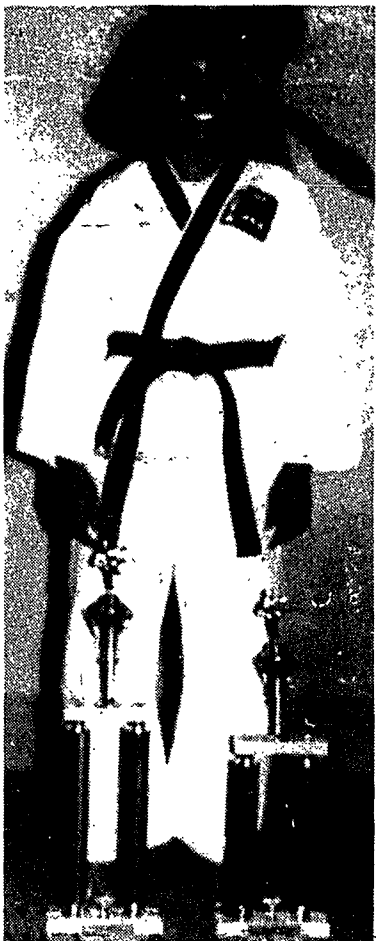

"I try to teach my students how to focus, and I emphasize discipline. They learn respect, and how to control themselves," said Schmitt.

Every command given by the instructor is answered with a resounding "Yes, ma'am" by the student.

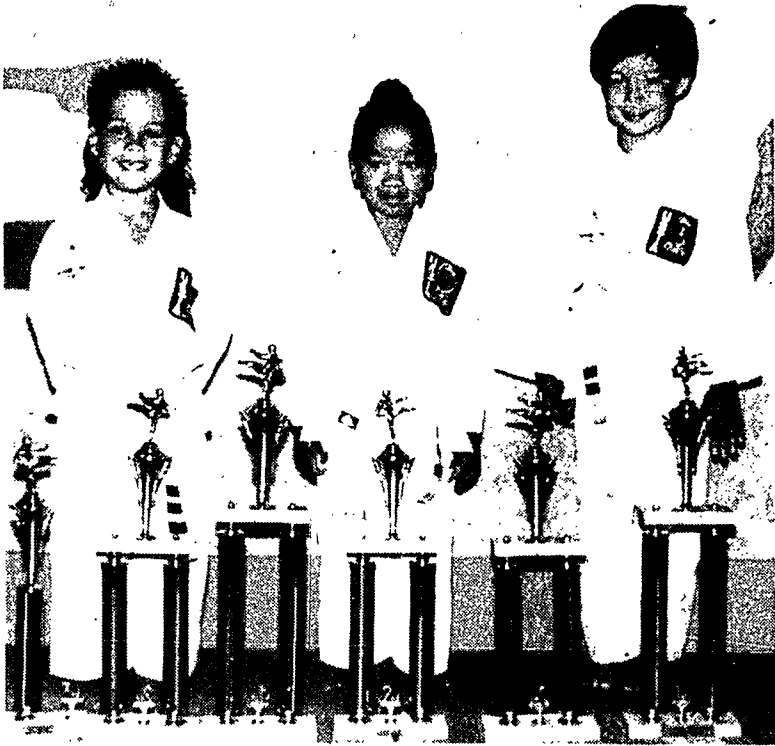

Schmitt's 13-year-old son, Eugene, is a second degree black belt and is an instructor-trainee. An eighth grader at St. Stanislaus, Eugene made the President's Honor Roll by making all A's on his report card.

The next step for Linda Schmitt and her young proteges is the upcoming national tournament which will be held September 22 in New Orleans. A field of more than 1500 participants is expected.

Tourney winner

Instructor Linda Schmitt recently won a first place trophy in form and a second place trophy in free-sparring events in Taekwondo Plus competition held July 21 in Mobile.

Karate winners

Billy McLain, Jewell Davis and Danny Shiel display trophies won during the Taekwondo Plus tournament held July 21 in Mobile. McLain, Shiel and Davis are students of certified black belt instructor Linda Schmitt of Pass Christian.

Wildcat Boosters meet August 23

The Pearl River College Wildcat Booster Club will meet Thursday, Aug. 23 at 6 p.m. in the Marvin R. White Coliseum. Booster Club officers will be elected at this meeting.

A "Meet the Team" session for all supporters of PRC will be at 7 p.m.

Wildcat season tickets for the 200-chair seats on the 50-yard line in the Dobie Holden Stadium are on sale now at $45 per seat. Those who purchased last year will have an opportunity to buy their same seats.

Wildcat players' families and friends, the PRC band, cheerleaders and String of Pearls' parents will have an opportunity to reserve seats in the area along with the general public.

Those wanting a chair-backed reserved seat near the non-reserved area (to keep an eye on the children) should choose their seats as soon as possible. D. R. Davis, Booster Club secretary, said this will enable parents to purchase their own reserved seats and then regular admission tickets for their children. The children then can be seated on a row in front of or to the side of their parents.

"Monkeying around"

Lakeshore couple trains macock monkeys to enjoy "people" activities

BY LIZ HAAS

Shanna, a stumped tailed macock monkey from Indonesia, enjoys many of the activities a normal child would, such as playing with clothes, a basketball, a bicycle, a swing and watching movies dealing with people.

The 10-year-old, 22-pound monkey can also eat with a spoon and drink from a glass or can.

Ann and Milton Paske of Lakeshore own Shanna along with three other monkeys, Poocho, Poncho and Clyde.

The couple has been training Shanna for seven months but have owned monkeys for several years.

"She was rambunctious when we first got her, because she had been in a cage for three years, but she began to feel comfortable after about three days of our working with her," said Ann.

The couple plans to advertise for Shanna to rent her out for various projects, such as birthdays and other parties.

The monkey can brush her teeth and is in the process of being potty-trained.

"I can tell she is trying to learn how to say 'Hi' because I can feel it in her stomach when she makes a noise. She can say a few one-syllable words when she feels that no one is looking at her and she is comfortable in her own surroundings—like when she is grooming herself, which is quite often," said Paske.

She said, "Monkeys are very shy. Shanna is very loveable and affectionate, but she is afraid of people.

"Monkeys do not look you in the eyes. If they catch sight of your stare they get nervous. To them, eye contact means submission. Some monkeys bite or slap when they are nervous; Shanna gets a nervous twitch. She doesn't bite."

Ann and Milton Paske teach the monkeys through example. They do not use physical discipline with the monkeys, instead they use a deeper verbal discipline.

"Monkeys are very trusting and you will lose their trust if you physically discipline them. When you hit them, everything you have taught them is lost and you are back to square one," she said.

Ann said the stumped tailed macock normally lives from 30 to 50 years in captivity and their strength is three times their weight.

Monkeys do not carry diseases. The only thing there is to worry about is tuberculosis testing and getting them wormed every six months, according to Ann.

Shanna is a shy and quiet monkey that stays very close to her owner.

"She gets very upset when she sees me with the other monkeys. She doesn't like me doing anything with them," said Ann.

'Whole earth' environmental study focus of Navy's forecast system

Scientists at the Atmospheric Directorate of the Naval Oceanographic and Atmospheric Research Laboratory in Monterey, Calif. (NOARL West) have developed an enhanced resolution atmospheric forecast system that allows smaller scale predictions over a longer time frame and provides major progress toward the development of a "whole earth" numerical model coupling air and sea environments.

Other researchers in the group include Dr. Timothy F. Hogan and Nancy L. Baker of Salinas, Calif., Dr. Ronald Gelaro and Dr. James S. Goerss of Marina, Calif., and L. Robin Brody of Seaside, Calif.

Developed over a 10-year period, the prototype NOGAPS went into operation in 1982. Since that time, Rosmond and his group have continued to improve the model.

This most recent version, day guidance.

According to Rosmond, a doubling of resolution requires nearly an eight-fold increase in computer time to run the very complex software. The advent of the large scale computer (LSC) will provide the researchers with the capacity to increase NOGAPS resolution even further, increase testing and perform more research.

Enabled by the LSC, these research efforts will be directed toward satisfying the Navy's need for accurate global atmospheric prediction that is second to none in the world.

"Here's an analogy," Rosmond said, "You could go buy a very nice, high-priced automobile from a local dealer, but you couldn't take it to the Indianapolis 500 and win. Developing a global model to be the ultimate in performance and technology is not unlike developing a high performance race car. It requires great attention to detail with more testing, more experiments, more research. The LSC allows the drive toward the model's peak performance."

Stemming from NOGAPS are global atmospheric field which drive a number of oceanographic programs led by other NOARL and FNOC scientists. The improvements to NOGAPS enhance these applications.

Two oceanographers from the Ocean Sensing and Prediction Division at NORAL headquarters at Stennis Space Center each led teams of numerical modelers working toward coupling ocean models with NOGAPS.

Dr. John M. Harding of Slidell, La., leads a team of NOARL scientists who developed the Thermodynamic Ocean Prediction System (TOPS), a mixed layer ocean model. Rosmond and his group are testing a prototype system to link NOGAPS to TOPS.

The researchers have also begun work toward coupling NOGAPS to the Polar Ice Prediction System (PIPS). Dr. Ruth H. Preller of Long Beach adapts PIPS form the Hibler sea ice model.

Direct coupling of air and sea models is not a simple task according to Rosmond. The different time and space scales of atmospheric and oceanic motion is just one of the problems scientists face in air/sea models.

At the air/ocean boundary layer, where time and space scales are comparable, the equilibrium between the sea surface and the lower atmosphere is a delicate balance that is easily upset by subtle biases in the physics of a coupled model system.

The LSC will make possible some of the advanced physics necessary to solve these problems.

The numerical coupling of the ocean, atmosphere and cryosphere into a "whole earth" environmental system is the ultimate challenge for modelers.

NOGAPS is a demonstrated beginning toward the oceanographer of the Navy's intent for the Navy to be a participant in the study of global climate change.

Led by Dr. Thomas E. Rosmond of Monterey, meteorologist and head of the Prediction Systems Branch at NOARL West, researchers delivered the latest version of the Navy Operational Global Atmospheric Prediction System (NOGAPS) to the Navy's Fleet Numerical Oceanographic Center, (FNOC), also located at Monterey, late last year. FNOC uses numerical atmospheric models to provide global forecasts guiding world wide naval operations.

labeled NOGAPS 3.2, has substantially greater resolution than earlier versions and extends useful atmospheric guidance out to more than five days.

The higher resolution allows forecasting of atmospheric phenomena at smaller and smaller scales.

Hurricanes are examples of atmospheric phenomena considered "small" on a global scale. A NOGAPS forecast on Sept. 20 of Hurricane Hugo's landfall gave excellent three-

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

Chicken livers, tasty and versatile, need so little in the way of preparation that I usually keep some on hand in fridge or freezer for quick, impromptu meals or appetizers.

The secret, of course, of truly tasty chicken livers is to avoid overcooking them; for overcooked chicken livers are not only hard and dry, they are also quite bitter in taste.

So, they should be cooked just until firm on the outside but still faintly pink in the center; if you cook them this way, even if you've not been a chicken liver fancier before, chances are that you'll change your mind and enjoy them.

Livers cook so quickly, even when frozen, that they are ideal to keep on hand for impromptu meals, as well as planned-ahead occasions. Sometimes I stockpile the livers in the freezer when I've bought whole chickens, until I have enough for a meal. At other times, I buy a pound or so from the market, rinse them and pat dry. Then I spread them out on cookie sheets and freeze them individually, then store in freezer bags or cartons. When frozen "loose" in this way, of course, the livers can be thawed quickly and cooked at once, in whatever quantity you wish.

I like to buy the livers fresh instead of frozen, when available, as I prefer to remove any globs of yellow fat which cling to the livers, before I freeze them.

At times I simply saute the livers in a bit of butter or margarine, adding chopped fresh parsley and green onions. At other times, I make a tomato sauce (of fresh tomatoes or tomato juice) or else I blanket the livers in a sour cream sauce, and I also like:

CHICKEN LIVERS WITH MUSHROOMS
1 lb. chicken livers
2 Tblsp. butter or margarine
1 clove garlic, minced
1 onion, sliced
1 large bell (green) pepper, seeded and sliced or in strips
1/4 lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced
1 or 2 tomatoes (approx-

mately a half-pound)

Pepper, salt according to your taste

Saute the livers in the butter or margarine very briefly, say a minute or so, then lower the heat, and add the onion bits, peppers and mushrooms, and continue cooking for several minutes, stirring about a bit from time to time.

Add the tomatoes, cut into chunks, and sort of mash them a little to help the juices flow. Simmer for two or three minutes longer; the vegetables should be mostly still on the crisp side. (Four servings)

Serve with grits or over rice as you wish. And, for a "double-stretch" dish, team up those relatively inexpensive livers with spaghetti.

For four servings, saute a dozen or so chicken livers in butter until done, adding splashes of white wine to your taste as the livers cook.

Cook the spaghetti, drain and toss with the chicken livers, then sprinkle liberally with a cup of minced parsley, along with Parmesan cheese. And don't forget the splashes of hot pepper sauce! You may want a bit more butter in this dish.

IN BRIEF

RIPENING

Different fruits and vegetables vary in ripening before and after harvesting.

Bananas and tomatoes, for example, will ripen after harvest into their desirable colors, textures and flavors.

Oranges, grapes, cucumbers and carrots will show little or no improvement in quality after picking.

CUT FRUIT

Cutting fruits or vegetables causes release of enzymes that speed fruit spoilage. Once cut, fresh produce should be refrigerated to delay such deterioration.

He may look like "big, bad John," but he's a regular guy, with a regular job and wears leather for protection. He rides an ironhorse.

He calls it "freedom...The wind in your face...When I get on my bike, it's like therapy. All my stress is gone."

John Grantham is a welder for the city of Hattiesburg. He received an announcement through a bikers association one day.

Hollywood agents were look-

Grantham is a featured extra now. He survived the various eliminations of the past month to have developed a working relationship with the lead actors.

"The role is easy, comfortable. I'm not trying to be anything but myself," said Grantham.

While filming a hospital sequence in Pascagoula last week, he found himself surrounded by autograph seekers, mistaking him for an actor.

"It felt strange to sign my name for people," he said. Grantham spoke of how his fellow workers cajole him about a future in the movies while still in disbelief of present events.

What Grantham takes most seriously is the fraternity he shares as a biker.

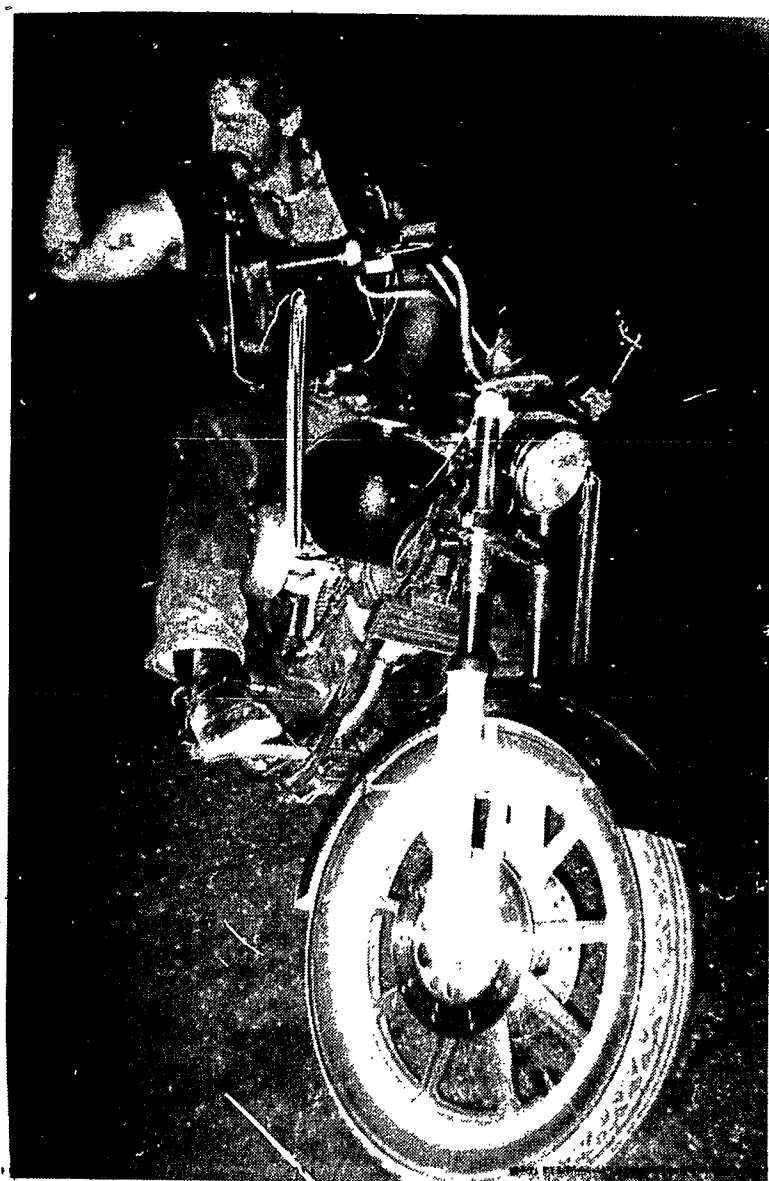

He explained, "The movie portrays bikers as outlaw, bad. But in reality, we are humans, like everybody else. Don't back us in a corner; don't test us."

"Average people see us in those clothes, they don't understand. People in cars, cages, we call them. They do not notice a motorcycle as another vehicle," said Grantham.

Grantham described the toy runs at Christmas for needy children. He spoke of the hundreds of thousands of dollars generated by the rally meets for charities and to help fight diseases. He spoke of the various occupations of bikers, white collar and blue.

"We are good people," said Grantham, "as anyone else. Bikers don't appreciate being stereotyped."

"I never thought it would happen," he expressed with renewed amazement.

The agents called, requesting his presence in Ocean Springs the next day. Grantham asked for a leave of absence, and Mayor Ed Morgan granted him an opportunity for a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

"Once you do something like this, you can never look at a movie the same way again," he said. "It's fascinating."
